How to Set Healthy Boundaries Around Arguing

This worksheet is designed to help you understand and set healthy boundaries to manage arguments in your relationships. By identifying your needs and limits, you can communicate more effectively, protect your well-being, and build stronger, healthier relationships. Use this worksheet to explore your boundaries and develop strategies for maintaining them.

PART 1: Visualize Your Boundaries

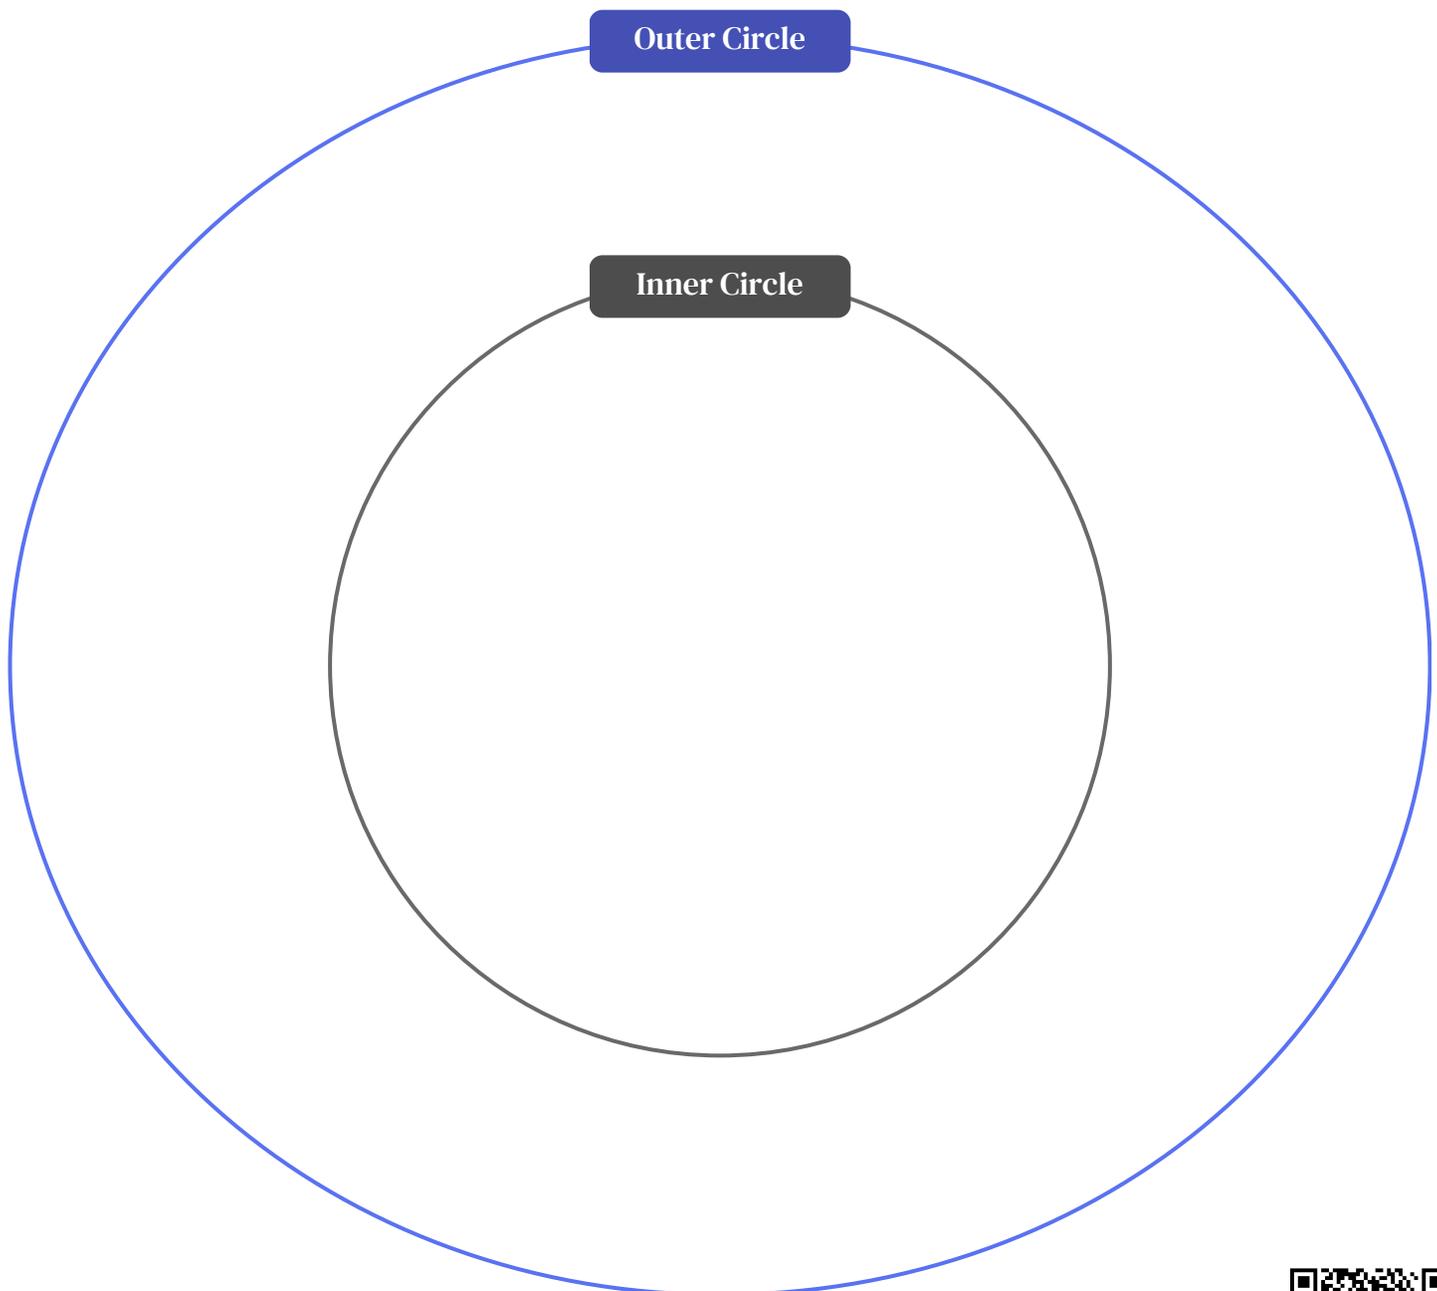

Inside the circle, write everything that makes you feel safe and respected during a disagreement. On the outside of the circle, down anything that makes you feel stressed, disrespected, or unsafe during a disagreement. These are behaviors or situations that push your boundaries and need further attention.

How to Set Healthy Boundaries Around Arguing

When filling out your inner and outer circle, here are some questions to consider:

- What actions or behaviors from my partner help me feel calm and respected during arguments?
- What behaviors or actions from my partner currently cause me stress during arguments?
- What specific moments in our arguments make me feel supported and valued?
- What about our arguments leaves me feeling drained and exhausted?
- What environments or settings help me feel more at ease during difficult conversations?
- What environments or settings make me feel more stressed or unsafe during arguments?

How to Set Healthy Boundaries Around Arguing

PART 2: How to Establish Your Communication Boundaries

Here are some basic rules and examples for communicating your boundaries effectively.

Use Confident Body Language

Stand or sit up straight, maintain eye contact, and use firm but calm gestures to convey confidence and assertiveness.

Be Clear & Set Consequences

Be specific about what behavior you want to change and clearly state what will happen if your boundary is not respected.

Keep Your Tone Calm and Respectful:

Speak calmly and assertively, avoiding raised voices or aggressive tones to maintain a respectful atmosphere.

Practice Active Listening:

Listen to the other person's response without interrupting and acknowledge their perspective while staying firm on your boundary.

Verbal Boundaries

- "I need you to speak to me in a calm, respectful tone."
- "I need you to avoid using sarcasm."
- "I need you to focus on the issue at hand and not make personal attacks."
- "I need you to clearly and honestly communicate without being evasive."

Emotional Boundaries

- "I want to feel that my feelings are acknowledged and validated."
- "I want you to apologize if you hurt my feelings during the argument."
- "I need you to avoid using my vulnerabilities against me."
- "I want to take breaks when I start feeling overly emotional."

Time Boundaries

- "I want to take a 10-minute break if it gets too heated."
- "I want to agree on a specific time to discuss conflicts, so I can mentally prepare."
- "I want to limit discussions to 30 minutes."
- "I need to postpone arguments if they start late at night, to ensure we both get enough sleep."

PART 3: Develop Strategies for Maintaining Boundaries (Example Page)

Use the following prompts to create a plan for reinforcing your boundaries consistently and effectively.

Situation:

Example: Whenever we argue, Steve often gets really loud and brings up stuff from the past, which makes me feel like I'm being attacked and overwhelmed.

Boundary I will set:

I need us to keep our voices down and stick to the current issue we're discussing.

Any potential challenges:

Steve might think I'm trying to avoid the argument or might ignore my request and keep arguing.

How I will handle these challenges:

If Steve starts raising his voice, I'll calmly say, "Remember, we agreed to keep our voices down. I need us to talk calmly so I can stay engaged in the conversation." If Steve keeps ignoring my request and gets even louder, I'll say, "I need a 10-minute break to calm down, and then we can continue." I'll go to another room or step outside to give myself time to relax. After we've both calmed down, I'll check in with him and say, "I noticed we had some trouble sticking to our agreed boundaries. Can we talk about how to improve this for next time?"

The narcissistic abuse cycle is a manipulation pattern used to control partners and make them question their reality. Each phase keeps the victim confused and dependent, trapping them in the abuse cycle. Use the following worksheet to track the behaviors of your narcissistic partner, your feelings, and your responses to help recognize if you are trapped in a narcissistic abuse cycle.

1. Idealization

The honeymoon stage.

The narcissist puts you on a pedestal and makes you feel special.

2. Devaluation

The narcissist removes you from the pedestal and begins to put you down with criticism, insults, and gaslighting.

You feel worthless.

4. Hoovering

The narcissist attempts to pull you back into the relationship.

They may use love-bombing, promises, or show up at your home or work to try to convince you to stay.

3. Rejection

The narcissist discards you.

This is especially likely if they are no longer getting their fill of ego-boosting attention and affirmations in the relationship.

Recovering from narcissistic abuse is a long process that takes time, so it is critical you allow yourself grace during this time. Make sure you have a safe environment to begin healing, seek support from loved ones, and consider working with a therapist. It can be challenging to talk about narcissistic abuse, but processing your experience may offer you a path to a healthier relationship with yourself and others.

Given the emotionally volatile and abusive nature of narcissistic relationships, it's important to seek help immediately if you feel you are in danger. You do not need to endure any kind of abuse and are not obligated to stay and work things out. Abuse should never be tolerated.

Stage 1: Idealization

The narcissist will put a partner on a pedestal and make them feel perfect or incapable of wrongdoing. This can feel nice at first, but it escalates quickly and becomes overpowering and overwhelming to the partner.

How did the narcissist behave?	How did you feel?	How did you respond?

Stage 2: Devaluation

The narcissist removes you from the pedestal. You may feel worthless as the narcissist begins to put you down, possibly by using verbal or physical abuse and physical intimacy as a weapon. When confronted, the narcissist plays the role of the victim and continues to devalue you.

How did the narcissist behave?	How did you feel?	How did you respond?

Stage 3: Rejection

In the rejection phase, the narcissist places all the blame and downfall of the relationship on you. The narcissist will discard you, especially if they are no longer getting their fill of ego-boosting attention and affirmations in the relationship.

How did the narcissist behave?	How did you feel?	How did you respond?
